Applying the new law to the averages of the past week we find that the total reserve required—namely, 25 per cent on deposits—is $58,232,300, from which should be deducted $1,325,565, which is 6 per cent upon the circulation of $20,511,300, and which 5 per cent should be in the Treasury, although the banks have not yet generally made the transfer. The reserve which by the new law they are required to hold in their vaults under this

They actually hold now $82,637,500, but $1,325,575 of this is due to the Treasury; so that the excess of lawful money held by banks above the legal requirement is $24,405,200. Last week, under the old law, the excess above legal requirement was $18,204,850. In connection with the above it is well to remark that this release of reserve against circulation in the banks introduces a new ature into the banking business, hence the following suggestion in a paper which is known as eminently conservative :- "In regard to the New York banks we are at liberty to say of some of them that it is their intention to give up their entire circulation; and, we hope to be able in a short time to add to give up entirely the national bank system, and organize under the laws of the State of New York, which assume that bankers know as much about their interests as do the people engaged in other branches of business." THE OPERATIONS ON THE STREET were confined to-day to the speculative shares, which simply responded to the currency move-THE SPECIE SHIPMENT

THE CROTON AQUEDUCT.

A Second Mill River Disaster Imminent-Nearly Two Square Miles of the City Liable to Inundation-Desperate Electioneering Tactics.

The inhabitants of the region lying about 100th street, west of the Central Park, have been for some time past greatly alarmed at the condition of the Croton Aqueduct. At last the spirit moved them to refer the matter to the HERALD. A representative of this paper went there yesterday and cailed on one of the principal property owners of the neighborhood, who pointed out the matters complained of. He owns two blocks between 100th and 102d streets, and lives in one of the houses immediately under the aqueduct, which is in

A SHOCKING CONDITION. It has been built thirty-seven years, and from old age has fallen into such a bad state of repair that one more severe winter might utterly destroy it. Even a severe thunder storm might occasion its absolute ruin. Leaks abound in the massive wall, pouring out in large streams in some places, and absolute ruin. Leaks abound in the massive wall, pouring out in large streams in some places, and dripping through the arches over the streets like summer showers. A broken stone over the 1924 street arch has allowed the water to pour out by the nogstead till it was choked up by the deposited silt or the mod, and then taking a new course, has broken out in a dozen fresh places. The mortar has become disintegrated and can be picked out in sond masses with the fingers or a walking cane. North of Ninty-ninth street the water is pouring out as from a hose. South of Ninety-eighth street are some very bad holes. Four barreis are filled every few minutes. The inhabitants of the neighboring stanties have placed them there for domestic convenience and inserted tin leaders in the walls of the aqueduct seems soild enough. The water is carried through arched brickwork and the walls faced with handsome masonry, eighteen inches thick, with arches over the streets; but entire neglect has left the great and meritorious work beyond repair. There is no way now of cutting off the water walle repairs could be made, and there is imminent danger of a collapse at any time without warning, which would deprive the city of water altogether and deluge nearly two square miles of the neighborhood. The people are greatly alarmed and the women especially are nervous and sleepless at every heavy shower. If a catastrophe occurred, the flood would sweep down to Fity-ninth street, filling the dangerous ravines from Sixty-second to Sixty-shith streets in Eighth avenue, Mahahatan square, Eighty-lighth and Eighty-ninth streets, the flood would sweep down to Fity-ninth street, filling the dangerous ravines from Sixty-second to Sixty-shith streets in Eighth avenue, Mahahatan square, Eighty-lighth and Eighty-ninth streets, the flood would sweep down to Fity-ninth street, filling the dangerous ravines from Sixty-second to Exty-ship and Eighty-lighth of the neighborhood in the appen. On Friday afternoon Mr. Alexander Clark, a retired member of the great spool cotton firm, came to New York from his home in Newark, N. J. What he did or where he went previous to falling in with Mr. Campton and the Messrs. Mumford no ing of his arrival Officer Pike, of the Fifth precinct, found him, in company with the gentlemen mentioned, meandering towards the North River, at tioned, meandering towards the North River, at Watts street. The officer noticed that Mr. Clark was helpessly drunk and that the Mumiords were carrying him. When brought to the station house a charge of intexication was made against Mr. Clark, who declared that he had been robbed by the parties in whose company he was found, and, also, they were carrying him to the river to throw him in. His story was so incoherent that the Sergent was not inclined to delieve it, but Mr. Clark showed the empty stud hole in his shirt, and the others were locked up on a charge of robbery. When brought to Court yesterday Mr. Clark relievated the statements made in the station noise on the previous night; but as the accused proved themselves to be men of character, the Court let them out on ball after the following statement had been made:—Mr. Mumford, it appears, keeps a livery stable, and Mr. Clark came to him to hire a coach, but having no money he left his watch and chain, studs and seal, as-security for the payment of the money, at the same time negotiating a loan in cash from Mr. Mumford. When the bail bond was made out and the examination day mentioned Mr. Clark was about to waik out when Officer Pike took him by the shoulder and brought him up to the Bar. "That's all right, Mr. Clark," said Judge Flammer. "You will be notified when the examination comes off," "But, Judge," interposed the officer, "this man is my prisoner. I arrested him ior being drunk and disorderly." "O! then we will fine you $10, Mr. Clark." Watts street. The officer noticed that Mr. Clark considerably excited over the report tha jewelry store of Mr. R. Teckritz, on Fulton street, was robbed of watches and lewelry to the amount was robbed of watches and lewelry to the amount of $500. From the facts elicited it appears that while Mr. Teckritz was engaged in the rear of the house with a plumber a young man entered the store and asked Mrs. Teckritz to accommodate him with two twenty-five cent stamps for a fity. She refused, stating that she had not the change. She infimediately returned in stairs to attend to her nouschold dusies. When Mr. Teckritz returned to the store he found four cases of jewelry turned to the store he found four cases of jewelry and seven gold wateness had been taken from the repair case. The worke affair is wrapped in a my-terry, some stading that Teckritz himself is the real culprit, since all the wateness stolen belonged to customers, who had last them for remairs.
